

I listen to K-LOVE radio at work, and value the station because it broadcasts inspiring music, with no offensive lyrics, loud commercials, or abrasive disk jockeys. Other local Christian stations are too distracting because they have talk shows in the afternoon. The station fills a unique niche for me. I am not allowed to listen on the internet at work because it takes too much bandwidth on our internet connection, so I am limited to stations strong enough to pick up on my radio. K-LOVE serves the community with rare family friendly programming and broadcasts both local and national news and weather. Although I am in favor of Low Power FM stations, they should not displace non profit regional translator services, particularly for types of programming not otherwise available.

Thank you for your consideration.
Dana Jo Orten